Oh Cross, Brighter Than All the Stars

Franco-Flemish composer Orlande de Lassus (c. 1532-1594) is considered to be one of the great masters of the polyphonic vocal style of the late Renaissance period. Oh Cross, Brighter Than All the Stars, a six-voice motet composed in 1568, is emblematic of his sophisticated compositional style. Although quite complex from a linear standpoint, the music retains a lyric simplicity which allows it to be easily grasped by the listener.

This instrumental setting is a one-to-one correspondence with the six-part vocal original, and was transcribed and edited from the Breitkopf & Hartel publication of 1927. Slurs in the brass ensemble setting correspond to melismas in the motet's text, and dynamics are static (mezzo piano to mezzo forte, throughout) - in keeping with Renaissance performance practice.

This setting can be performed by one player - or multiple players - per part, each with great success. Feel free to experiment with combinations that best suit your needs.
